BRISTOL'S TEAM

IS COMING FAST

Last Year's Champs of Appalachian League Leave Cellar Position for Third Place.

Bristol, Va., June 30.—While this time last year "Red" Munson's Bristol Boosters of the Appalachian League found themselves running away with the 1912 pennant, they now are climbing out of the car, where for almost a month they drank the wormwood of disappointment to the dreks. But by the time they had drunk enough, they climbed to third position. Munson would feel that his prospects for the pennant this season were bright, but for the time being, the Soldier boys of the same league absolutely decline to accept their turn to slump. The soldier boys have been going strong almost from the opening of the season, and they're deciding to win all the way. They've won a possible six, and the odds are four to one that they will win all the way. The odds are four to one that they will win the series.

permitted any of the other teams to take the lead of them.

Munson's trouble has been a lack of pitching force. He lost his strong staff of pitchers at the close of last season.

most of them having been advanced to major league company. This season Munson is depending upon Browder, an Indianan of the American Association; Burleson, a center-batter from the South; and a pitcher, a right-hander from Lexington and Virginia. League and American Club of America. The American Club of America is a new club, organized last night by Alan R. Hawley, the club, and chairman of the contest committee. And last is expected to qualify, that will make treatment of the contest. The American Club of America is a new club, organized last night by Alan R. Hawley, the club, and chairman of the contest committee. And last is expected to qualify, that will make treatment of the contest.

The standing of the teams will indicate more than anything else just now what the league teams may anticipate in the contest for the pennant:
